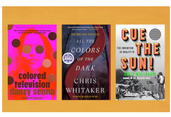
View 3 more stories

By Ann Hornaday
Ann Hornaday is The Washington Post's chief film critic. She is the author of "Talking Pictures: How to Watch Movies." She joined The Post in 2002. @AnnHornaday

More for you

13 new paperbacks for your reading list

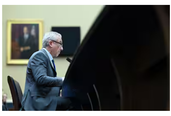
Today at 9:00 a.m. EDT



Opinion Karen Tumulty

HHS under Kennedy might be moving to undercut lifesaving preventive care

Today at 4:18 p.m. EDT



Opinion Philip Bump

When institutions crumble, strongmen step in

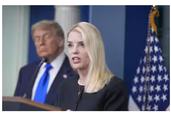
July 17, 2025

Trump administration releases after-school funding

Today at 3:38 p.m. EDT

Justice Dept. asks for names, records of noncitizens in California jails

Today at 10:40 a.m. EDT



Most read

1 Carolyn Hax chat: My husband's killer only got a slap on the wrist. I want justice.

2 Trump said he 'never wrote a picture in my life.' Here are four.

3 Justice Dept. asks court to release Epstein grand jury testimony

4 What made 'The Late Show with Stephen Colbert' special, in six clips

5 Column Lili Loofbourow
The end of Colbert's 'Late Show' has implications beyond late-night TV

NEWSLETTER | FRIDAYS

Book Club

Our weekly selection of book reviews and recommendations from Book World editor Ron Charles.

Sign up

Paid Promoted Stories

The Silk Cardigan Everyon…
fashioninus…

Ask A Pro: "I'm 70 With…
smartasset.…

Top Vet Warns: "Never …
Dr. Marty

Costco's Best-Kept Secret F… wrinkles.pro

California Legalizes Powerfu…
Health Bre…

I study finance, people…
Betterbuck

FOR YOU
Analysis | Could Bengals rookie Shemar Stewart really return to college football?

washingtonpost.com © 1996-2025 The Washington Post